Notes

- 你可能生病了。
“了” is usually used at the end of a sentence. Here it shows the situation has changed.
- 量量体温。
“量量” is the reduplicate form of the verb “量” to indicate a simple and short action.
- 你需要在家休息。
“在” is a preposition here. When “在+Location” is followed by a verb, it indicates where the action takes place.

Text in English

Mother: Xiaoming, what's the matter with you?
Xiaoming: I'm not feeling well.

Mother: You are probably sick.
Let's go to the hospital.

(In the hospital)
Doctor: What seems to be the problem?

Xiaoming: I'm having a headache, and a sore throat, too.

Doctor: Let me take your temperature.
You have a fever, and you've got a cold.
Take some medicine.

Doctor: You need to have some rest at home.
Xiaoming: Great! I don't have to go to school today!
